Getting the most from the NYS Trauma-Informed Network

WELCOME

TO THE NEW YORK STATE TRAUMA-INFORMED NETWORK

We're here to connect you with other organizations around NYS, bringing you resources and events on a variety of topics that promote trauma-responsive practices.

Our goal is to support champions of trauma responsive practices across the state with improved connection and access to quality resources. Together we can increase the collective understanding of trauma, improve practice, and support resilience throughout New York State.

FOCUS ON: Foundations of TIC

Focus

More and more programs, organizations, agencies, communities, and systems are recognizing the impact of trauma on wellness. They are looking to trauma-informed care as a foundational framework to improve outcomes. A measure to guide implementation is a vital tool. The Journal of Community Psychology recently published an article where authors completed a systematic review of peer-reviewed and gray literature, identifying 49 systems-based measures that were created to assess the extent to which relational, organizational, and community/system practices were trauma-informed. Of the tools referenced, they included CCSI's Trauma Responsive Understanding Self-Assessment Tool (TRUST). The TRUST tool provides a point in time assessment of an organization's trauma-responsive practices. Results are paired with recommendations and links to resources based on the organization's score. Use of the tools is free in New York State

Mt. Hope Family Center

Champion's Corner

This month we acknowledge the contributions of Dr. Jody Todd Manly. Dr. Manly is a committed champion to expanding trauma-responsive practices throughout New York State, nationally, and internationally.

Dr. Manly is the Clinical Director of Mt. Hope Family Center and a licensed clinical psychologist in New York State. She has been involved with the implementation and evaluation of evidence-based interventions for high-risk children and families since 1991. Dr. Manly has been a Principal Investigator or Co-Principal Investigator on several federally-funded research projects on the linkages among trauma, depression, child maltreatment, poverty, domestic violence, and community violence from infancy through adolescence. She is interested in translating research evidence into effective clinical practice.

Mt. Hope Family Center is a member of the National Child Traumatic Stress Network, where Dr. Manly works with national trauma experts on provision of evidence-based trauma treatments. She is a member of the national faculty providing training in Child-Parent Psychotherapy (CPP). Dr. Manly is committed to training professionals, and she has supervised graduate students in psychology, counseling, and social work, as well as provided workshops locally, nationally, and internationally. She was honored to be appointed as Executive-at-Large for the World Association for Infant Mental Health (WAIMH) and continues to be inspired by the dedicated people around the world who are working on behalf of young children and their families.
